Lately I've been crying a lot due to various reasons my physical and mental struggles, academic pressures, family expectations, past traumas and the overwhelming weight of desires and tragedies. At one point I was engulfed in darkness unable to find happiness, peace or even a smile. Although I still don't fully understand the source of my tears I now find myself moved by the kindness of others. Watching people's acts of humanity whether done knowingly or unknowingly, inspires me and brings tears to my eyes. In a world filled with negativity, even the smallest gestures of goodness deeply affect me. "Always humanity wins."
